

Maroondah 2050 Community Vision

Over the next few decades, Maroondah will change significantly. Decisions that are made now will affect how we live our lives in the year 2050 – the type of homes we live in, our jobs, how we travel and how connected we will feel as a community. Maroondah 2050 is about ensuring that our community is able to influence and have a say on the long term strategic decisions that will shape our future.

What is a Community Vision?

A Community Vision describes a community's long term hopes and aspirations for their municipality. It provides a 'road map' for the community, Council and other levels of government to partner together to create a future that enhances the municipality as a great place to live, work, play and visit.

How will the Maroondah 2050 Community Vision be developed?

Development of the Maroondah 2050 Community Vision will include five key stages.

We are currently seeking community input for the "Where do we want to go and how do we get there" stage.

Looking towards 2050

Research on emerging trends already provides us with a snapshot of life in 2050. The population of Maroondah is predicted to increase by approximately 25,000 people, requiring an extra 11,000 dwellings to live in. Significant long-term changes will include an aging and more diverse population. In addition, the local economy and the mix of jobs within Maroondah will change. The type of work we do will shift away from traditional manufacturing towards jobs in the professional and health sectors. There will be changes to the way we travel and a need to adapt to climate change.
